

PRESS RELEASE

Wellpoint Health Announces Acquisition to Expand Its Preventative Health and Digital Patient Engagement Portfolio

Acquisition strengthens Wellpoint Health's position as an integrated preventative health, patient engagement, and digital care pathway partner for NHS, corporate, community, and life sciences organisations.

London, UK — 25th, June 25, 2026 — Wellpoint Health Ltd, operating under the Well.Me brand, is pleased to announce the acquisition of Cognitant Group and the healthinote patient education platform. Cognitant Group is a specialist digital health and patient engagement organisation with established experience supporting NHS organisations, life sciences partners, and patient education programmes.

The acquisition represents an important step in Wellpoint Health's strategy to build a broader preventative health ecosystem, combining clinically validated health screening kiosks, digital engagement tools, personalised health journeys, risk prediction, AI-enabled health coaching, and population health analytics.

Through this acquisition, Wellpoint Health will be able to offer clients a wider portfolio of capabilities across early identification, patient education, self-management, adherence support, digital care pathways, and population-level health insights.

The expanded group brings together:

Well.Me Health Screening Kiosks

User-friendly, self-service health screening kiosks that support the capture of key health metrics including blood pressure, heart rate, BMI, body composition, and cardiovascular risk assessment.

Digital Patient Engagement and Education

Personalised digital content, self-management tools, patient education resources, and condition-specific engagement programmes delivered through email, SMS, QR codes, and mobile-friendly platforms.

Preventative Health and Risk Stratification

Tools that support earlier identification of health risks, signposting to care pathways, and targeted intervention across community, workplace, NHS, and pharmacy settings.

Population Health Analytics

Aggregated and anonymised insights to help organisations understand health trends, identify risks, measure engagement, and support evidence-led decision-making.

AI-Enabled Health Journeys

A future-ready roadmap including AI-driven personalisation, health coaching, personal health records, and integration with wider digital health systems.

Surendra Patel, Managing Director of Wellpoint Health Ltd, said:

“ This acquisition is a significant milestone for Wellpoint Health. It allows us to bring together preventative health screening, digital patient engagement, education, and data-driven population health insights into one broader and more integrated offering. Our goal is to support NHS organisations, employers, pharmacies, life sciences partners, and community health programmes with practical, scalable tools that improve access, engagement, early detection, and long-term health outcomes.”

The acquisition also enhances Wellpoint Health’s ability to support NHS-aligned priorities, including early detection, community-based access to health checks, reduction of pressure on primary care, improved patient engagement, and the development of scalable preventative health pathways.

The acquired platform has demonstrated experience across a broad client base, including programmes supporting patients with long-term conditions, multilingual patient education, treatment understanding, therapy initiation, and adherence support. This experience complements Wellpoint Health’s existing kiosk and digital health infrastructure and strengthens its ability to deliver measurable value across healthcare, corporate wellbeing, and life sciences markets.

Dr Timothy Ringrose, Founder of Cognitant Group, added:

“Healthcare is moving towards prevention, earlier intervention, and more personalised digital engagement. By combining Well.Me, Healthinote, and our wider technology roadmap, we are creating a stronger platform that can help organisations move from reactive care to proactive health support.”

Following the acquisition, Wellpoint Health will continue to invest in technology development, service delivery, clinical partnerships, and platform integration. The company remains focused on delivering practical, low-risk, and scalable solutions that support patients, employees, clinicians, and healthcare systems.
